

To whom it may concern:

These comments are in regard to the proposal of the FCC to expand LPFM stations in a way that would allow them to take priority over current FM translator services. One such radio station that I listen to, that relies on the use of FM translators is K-Love radio.

I listen to K-Love radio in my hometown, and often when I am traveling on leisure and business. I know that many times this is possible only because of FM translator stations. For me, listening to K-Love is more than just receiving entertainment during leisure time. I learn about news and issues that concern me as a Christian, and I believe that the music they play has a positive message that is important for my community to be able to hear. It truly is in the public interest to keep services (such as FM translator and LPFM) working the way that they are today, because K-Love is a positive influence on the community at large, and because they broadcast news on issues that concern me, that I would not otherwise find out about.

Thank you for taking the time to read my comments, and I appreciate your thoughtful consideration of my viewpoint in making your decision.

Kind regards
Sara Ennis
